PAST RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Center for Applied Behavior Systems (CABS), Blacksburg, V.A.

2003 - 2004

Undergraduate Research Group

- This research group was formed by the Psychology Department at Virginia Tech and directed by E. Scott Geller, Ph.D., in order to increase awareness around issues such as driving and personality (the FLASH Project), social influence and alcohol intake.
- Attended weekly general meetings for project updates and lectures, gaining data entry and verification experience.
- Received training in Driving Simulator video coding and operating breathalyzers for specialized research within the field
- FLASH training - Sponsored by the National Board of Health and the Town of Christiansburg (VA), the FLASH training sessions were used to promote safe driving behavior and better communication on the road using a light to signal to other drivers; Learned how to gain informed consent and collect data from participants within the project.
- Alcohol Research Project - Researchers visited various functions such as fraternity parties, the downtown district of Blacksburg, and football tailgates in order to collect Blood Alcohol Content (BAC). We compared different variables such as location, sex, time, holiday and anxiety in order to see how they affected BAC measures after administering surveys and acquiring informed consent from participants.

Visions in Feminism is a Washington, DC-based collective of people brought together by the common goals of social justice, feminism, and solidarity. Aside from the various fundraisers, concerts and speaking events, the collective holds an annual conference surrounding a different theme at American University. An Art Night is also held as a fundraiser to support a local organization, H.I.P.S, a comprehensive program providing a variety of services, education and advocacy to sex workers and the community.
